

A Working List of the Birds of the Channel Islands

Glyn Young, Mark Lawlor, Tony Paintin & Paul Veron

This Working List includes details of all those bird species recorded in the (British) Channel Islands of Jersey (including Les Écréhous and Les Minquiers), Guernsey (including Herm, Jethou and Lihou), Alderney (including Burhou and the Casquets) and Sark (including Brecqhou) that have been accepted by the islands' respective ornithological committees. Some recent records may not be included, as the relevant committee has not yet verified them. Further details of each species or of individual records can be found in published reports or by contacting the committees directly (see below). Records are updated annually after individual islands' records committees have discussed the preceding year's reports. The report is currently updated to 31st December 2016 and the authors are grateful this year to Mick Dryden (Jersey), Phil Atkinson (Guernsey), John Horton (Alderney) and Richard Axton (Sark) for their help in maintaining this list. Mick Dryden, Tim Liddiard, Paul Marshall, Regis Perdriat, Vic Froome and Romano da Costa kindly let us use their photographs. We are very grateful to Mark Atkinson and Jill Watson for their contribution in creating this list in 2006.

Status

To date it has been difficult for the authors to standardise the status of birds in the four islands as interpretation has often differed and coverage has been patchy. As a guideline, however, the following categories have been used to describe status:

Resident - recorded throughout the year

Breeding species

Occasional - has bred in most years

Rare - 1-10 pairs breed in most years

Scarce - 11-50 pairs breed in most years

Common - 51-500 pairs breed in most years

Very common - 500+ pairs breed in most years

Abundant - more than 1,000 pairs breed in most years

Migrants and non-breeding visitors

Accidental - each record is recounted

Occasional - individuals out of season

Rare - 10-20 records

Scarce - 21-50 individuals

Common - 51-100 individuals

Very common - 101-1,000 individuals

Abundant - more than 1,000 individuals

In practice, some of the categories have been further elaborated (e.g. fairly common) to give a better impression of status. Examination of the status on different islands shows either interesting zoogeographical patterns (e.g. Brent Goose Branta bernicla and Eurasian Jay Garrulus glandarius) or limited historical observer coverage (e.g. European Honey-buzzard Pernis apivorus and Little Gull Hydrocoloeus minutus). It is hoped that both local and visiting birders will see the gaps in the knowledge of Channel Island birds and plan their visits accordingly. Please submit all records to the relevant island's recorder.
